Yes I just came off a 3.5 day silent meditation retreat in update NY. Very refreshing and calming too.

Sleep well!

Redacted - First Amendment

Finally, on the 80% reduction by 2050 goal, the EDF/TNC CEO Climate Dialogue (CCD) has indeed had that as part of their guiding principles from the beginning. It also echoes the ambition which I believe was referenced in a footnote to the original US NDC document submitted by the Obama Administration as part of the Paris agreement. I do not recall the CLC incorporating this 2050 aspiration explicitly and publicly but I may have forgotten or missed it.

Yes the 50% cut by 2035 has always been part of the proposition, along with 80% by 2050. The prices were modelled to deliver these outcomes. I don't think the 80% is going to be in the announcement is it Bob?

Thanks Dominic and Paul. CLC's analysis suggests that the carbon fee they are supporting — starting at $40 a ton (in 2017$) and increasing annually at 5% over inflation — will cut US carbon emissions in half by 2035 versus 2005. They plan to reference this in the updated Pillars document on their website, which now will exclude the prior reference to liability relief. They also are adding a specific reference in the Pillar on regulatory simplification to the preemption of current and future stationary source carbon regulations, which puts some further meat on the bones.

CLC delivered to me late Friday (in hard copy) their revised Pillar document and a comms plan for rollout of this (including esp removal of the liability relief provision). They plan to roll this out next week. I will send that along soon to you and others for awareness. Bottom line, XOM has apparently agreed to this plan at least for now and so crisis averted in terms of XOM on one side or Microsoft on the other making a noisy withdrawal over the liability issue.

Ted Halstead did approach me last week to ask about CLC arranging meetings with companies and ENGOs on the margins of the OGCI meeting. I was a bit cool to this as there did not seem like a natural space for it, plus while XOM seems to be staying with CLC for now I am not sure how enthusiastic they (or Shell) would be about participating in a big public campaign by CLC around the UN events at this time.

Let me know your thoughts and also happy to set a time to discuss.

Best,
Bob

Paul, Bob

FYI — looks like CLC want to say something at the UN in September, and cross-reference the OGCI member companies. Just wanted you to be aware as reducing emissions by half in 2035 sounds pretty out there!

Best regards

Julien,

These folks, Climate Leadership reached out to speak with us about doing something together - please scroll down.

- do we know / work with them?

- here's their quote:

“Our mutual member companies, including Exxon, BP, Shell, and Total, will make a big announcement during the UN meeting in New York that they are endorsing an ambitious plan to price carbon in order to lower emissions by half by 2035.”

Please advise what would be sensible next steps?

Thanks

Susan

Hi Hayley,

Thanks for following up on this. It would be good to be in contact with them to know more about what they are planning and how they would like to cooperate -@Susan Kish who do you think is best placed to have that conversation?

Quick summary on them: The Climate Leadership Council is an international policy institute founded in collaboration with a who's who of business, opinion and environmental leaders to promote a carbon dividends framework as the most cost-effective, equitable and politically-viable climate solution.

Hello, Just following up on the below. Our mutual member companies, including Exxon, BP, Shell, and Total, will make a big announcement during the UN meeting in New York that they are endorsing an ambitious plan to price carbon in order to lower emissions by half by 2035. It seems like this announcement would fit in well with your plans for New York as well.

Given our mutual interest in promoting the work our member companies are doing in the climate space, would you be available for a brief call on Friday to discuss how we can help with your efforts in New York?

Thank you, Carlton

Dear H,

I work with Matt at the Climate Leadership Council, and he forwarded me your response. Thanks for your help.

I'm hoping you might be able to chat briefly your goals for the conference? Our mutual member companies have asked us to work with you to coordinate our activities at the UN. Might you or one of your colleagues be available for a brief telephone call this week to discuss? I want to be sure we are helpful in supporting your mission.

All best, Carlton

Hi Matt,

So sorry for my delay in response, we seem to be having some troubles with our response email – thank you for your patience!

At this moment, I am unable to share any more detail than was included within the official invitation as we are still in the process of confirming the final agenda and also guest list.

Ahead of the event, joining instructions will be sent which will give an overview of each element of the day.

Best,

H

Dear OGCI Organizing Committee,

I am reaching out on behalf of Ted Halstead.

Do you have any additional details that you can provide about the event? In particular, we would love to know more about the format for each of the events, any additional details you have on the Working Sessions, and who else has confirmed their participation at this point.

I understand that some details are still being finalized, so I greatly appreciate whatever information you can provide.

All the best,

Matt
