I agree we should do this but am a bit more inclined toward option 2 as it cites the specific SER target. I also would consider adding the “stringent” methane intensity target of .2%.

Good stuff, Brett! I’m all for this and think Option 1 nails it. Bob?

Liz, Bob --

The NYSE has approached a number of its listed companies to see if they want to include a short message about their sustainability efforts in a special Earth Day (April 22) post on the stock exchange’s website. IR is supportive, and it seems like a good opportunity from a media standpoint. We obviously have a lot of approved AET messaging that could fit – and will likely have more with the SR launch on Wednesday.

Below are three options I pulled together, using existing messaging (including from last SR draft I saw) and the NYSE’s roundup from last year as a rough guide: <https://www.nyse.com/article/community/earth-day>. Only rule is that the entry not exceed 100 words.

Please let me know if you like one of these and we can send around to others for review and approval.

Option #1:

BP: As the world demands more energy, it also demands that it be delivered in new ways, with fewer emissions to combat climate change. At BP, we embrace this dual challenge. Indeed, the ‘reduce, improve, create’ framework we recently introduced focuses the whole of BP on reducing emissions in our operations, improving our products and creating low-carbon businesses. Only by operating as a responsible and reliable business do we earn the trust of investors and society more widely – trust that is essential for BP to fully play its part in advancing a low carbon future and human progress.

Option #2

BP: In 2018, BP set clear, near-term and specific targets aimed at reducing its emissions and advancing the energy transition, including achieving 3.5 million tonnes of sustainable emissions reductions out to 2025. We have already made significant progress in the year since, but we are not done. As the world demands more energy, it also demands that it be produced and delivered in new ways, with fewer emissions to help combat climate change. At BP, we embrace dual challenge, and we are committed to playing our part in advancing a low carbon future and human progress.

Option #3

BP: The world needs more energy, but produced and used in ways that are cleaner, better and kinder to the planet. This is reflected in our strategy and in the 'reduce, improve, create' framework we recently introduced that focuses the whole of BP on reducing emissions in our operations, improving our products and creating low-carbon businesses. At BP, we are not daunted by what we see as the dual challenge of meeting the world's rising energy needs with fewer emissions. In fact, we see the possibilities it presents, and continue to make bold changes across the group as part of our commitment of advancing a low-carbon future.

Brett,

Time flies ... should you be interested in us having you included in this year's listed company feature,

April 22 is Earth Day. Below is a link to what was published for Earth Day 2018. Companies can update their statements from last year or submit new ones. Keep these statements below 100 words.

Let me know and please send your input directly to me.

Thanks,

Stefan

Craig, Brian,

We are going to highlight a select number of our listed companies for Earth Day, which is on April 22, 2018. [We will do this in a similar fashion to the post we made following Hurricane Harvey, which you can find here <https://www.nyse.com/network/article/great-companies-doing-great-things>.]

Should you be interested, let us proceed as follows:

- Please feel free to highlight the environmental and sustainability efforts that you are most proud of and/or are highlighting yourself for Earth Day.
- Please summarize these efforts in one or two sentences. Shorter the better. (you get the idea from the link above)
- Please provide a link to the section of your website where you highlight these efforts.

Let us know what you think.

Have a good evening,

Stefan
