Subject: FYI - Kerry quoted by E&E saying he will not name companies aggressively making energy transition

Redacted - First Amendment

As the Biden administration maps out a transition to cleaner energy, Kerry said he is hoping that "many of the folks" at the summit will embrace change.

"What they ought to be figuring out is how do we become not an oil and gas company, but how do we become an energy company," Kerry said. "How do we reduce the byproduct of oil and gas, which is carbon, which is the problem, and methane, which is a problem. That's the challenge."

He noted, but said he would not name, "some companies," which are moving aggressively to make the transition. But others, he said "continue to fight to hold on to whatever the market share is, which is going to diminish."
