Thanks for this. So my question is what does this mean for the U.S.? How will you more actively advocate for policies that support net zero? Will you pull money from parties or candidates that don't support carbon pricing? Or alternatively will you support their opponents?

Hello Leslie,
Good speaking with you. Attached is a copy of Bernard Looney, our new CEO's remarks from Feb. 12 on how BP is aiming to be net zero by 2050 or sooner. Here is what Bernard said about aim 6 which includes advocating for a price on carbon.
"Aim number 6 is to more actively advocate for policies that support net zero, including carbon pricing. That will include stopping corporate reputation advertising, like the Possibilities Everywhere campaign, and re-directing the money to promote net zero policies, ideas, actions, collaborations and our own net zero ambition."
Additionally we have expressed our support for a carbon price in Washington State with SB 5981. More information is here: <https://www.bp.com/carbonprice.html>
Best, Jason

Jason, my colleague Leslie, CCed here, is working on a story on the politics of pricing carbon.

I suggested she talk with BP in view of not just the Washington state proposal but also the Transportation and Climate Initiative.

I'm hoping you two can connect on this.

Cheers,

Jen.
