GUARDIANS OF THE ENVIRONMENT: New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman asserted the U.S. was entering a new era of "progressive federalism" on Tuesday with a coalition of attorneys general responsible for guarding against environmental rollbacks, POLITICO New York Marie J. French reports. "With the new administration clearly in the pockets of the fossil fuel industry, the chemical industry and others, and putting people in power who deny the most basic science, it's very important to recognize the brilliance of our federal system that there is this second tier of protection at the state level," he said.
