

Resolution of Inquiry:

Investigating Trump-Musk Attacks on Federal Employees

Why Is This Necessary?

- President Trump, Elon Musk, and the DOGE team have been on a rampage to purge the government of non-partisan public servants and install political loyalists willing to turn a blind eye to corruption and grift.
- Despite repeated efforts by Committee on Oversight and Government Reform Democrats, the Administration has failed to provide any information about its plans or actions related to this purge. These efforts include:

- House Republicans have refused to protect our dedicated civil servants or work with Democrats to ensure that these reasonable questions are answered. They even blocked Democrats' attempt to subpoena Elon Musk to testify before the Committee.
  - 80 percent of federal workers live and work outside the Washington, D.C. metro area.

What Does this Resolution Do?

- The resolution would require the Administration to provide documents, communications, and information regarding:
  - All federal employees put on administrative leave, removed, terminated, transferred, or assigned to another department on the recommendation of Elon Musk or DOGE.
  - The Office of Personnel Management's determination that employees classified as diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) or employed in an office that conducts work to improve diversity, equity, and inclusion in government would be subject to removal.
  - The removal of nonpartisan agency inspectors general, and whether the Administration discussed notifying Congress as legally required.

What is a Resolution of Inquiry?

- A Resolution of Inquiry (ROI) is a House resolution that makes a direct request or demand of the President or head of an executive department (e.g. the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Interior, etc.) to provide factual information in the Administration's possession.
- Once introduced, the Committee to which the ROI is referred has 14 legislative days to act on and report the resolution to the House or it will become privileged on the House floor.
- A ROI that is not reported to the House within 14 legislative days becomes privileged and a non-debatable motion to discharge the ROI for consideration on the House floor becomes available.
