Dear Mr. Park:

Yesterday, I received a letter from the Office of Science and Technology Policy communicating your refusal to testify at the Committee's November 13, 2013, hearing on the development and rollout of the HealthCare.gov website. While the Committee understands that you are playing a role in the effort to improve the website, Congress has a constitutionally-mandated duty to conduct oversight of the Executive Branch. This Committee's responsibility is to identify waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement, and to ensure that departments and agencies are spending taxpayer dollars wisely. The Committee's upcoming hearing is crucial in understanding both what went wrong with HealthCare.gov and what lessons can be learned going forward.

Your role in the development and rollout of HealthCare.gov, both before and after the October 1, 2013, launch, uniquely positions you to provide testimony that will be valuable for both Congress and the public. According to Henry Chao, Deputy Chief Information Officer at the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services, you were a central leader in the development of HealthCare.gov since Obamacare became law in March 2010.¹ Thus, your participation at the hearing is imperative.

Therefore, I am writing to request that you reconsider your refusal to testify. Please confirm your participation at the hearing as soon as possible, but by no later than 5:00 p.m. on November 8, 2013. If you continue to refuse to testify at the Committee's November 13, 2013, hearing, the Committee will be forced to consider the use of compulsory process to require your attendance.
